

Geomant expands into the Americas.

AUSTIN, Texas, November 1, 2011: Unified Communications software vendor Geomant today announced its expansion into the Americas, with the launch of Geomant Americas Inc.

“Empowering our US and Latin America partners to even further please their clients.”

Geomant has been a leading provider of Avaya and Microsoft contact center solutions services, custom software development and self-developed products for over ten years. The Company originated in Europe and already has offices in Sydney, Australia covering the APAC region. With increasing business coming from the Americas, Geomant is reacting to market demand by expanding its operations throughout the US and Latin America. Working predominantly through Avaya and Microsoft channel partners, Geomant is bringing a new portfolio of products and services which will help these partners drive more business by filling gaps in the existing solutions and improving integration options.

“Avaya and Microsoft partners have extensive knowledge around the contact center solutions space,” said Geomant Americas director Carl Ramey. “Many of these partners however don’t have the luxury of maintaining a large development staff to produce the niche products required by many customers or the expertise to provide custom solutions. That is where Geomant’s global network of Avaya and Microsoft experts and developers comes in. Partners in America can now rely on Geomant’s new products and extensive workforce of experienced and certified engineers to assist them in winning deals and providing the best possible service to their customers.”

Geomant was formed in 2000 by former Avaya Professional Services employees who wanted to focus on building their own company around the principle of delivering outstanding solutions and service at a very competitive price. This proved to be a winning formula as the company continued to grow and expand throughout Europe by bringing on other highly experienced developers and implementation experts. The company now offers a staff comprised over 130 developers, installation engineers, project managers, support and other personnel spread across 9 countries including the US.

“We are very excited to be building our relationships with Avaya and Microsoft contact center solutions providers,” said Carl Ramey. “Our contact center, unified desktop solutions, CRM connectors, and outbound dialer expertise are all being enthusiastically embraced by the partner community. We look forward to growing our footprint throughout the Americas and empowering our partners to even further please their clients.”
